Interstates: Championing Diversity

Each year at the Associated Builders & Contractors (ABC) awards ceremony, Interstates is recognized for project excellence and their commitment to clients. For the first time at this year's ABC National Convention held back on March 15th, ABC presented top companies with a new award, the National Inclusion, Diversity, and Merit Excellence Award (IDM), and Interstates was proud to be recognized as champion in this category.

"Career opportunities should be created and made available to all Americans, and these award-winning IDM leaders in construction champion this ethos at their companies where individuals are limited only by their own potential and desire," said 2024 National Chair of the ABC Board of Directors Buddy Henley, president, Henley Construction Co. Inc., Gaithersburg, Maryland. "Driving principles like free enterprise and open competition are focused on bettering the individual, the industry and the nation. IDM is an empowering competitive advantage, and ABC is honored to recognize organizations that continually prioritize these valuable components to any vibrant culture."

Interstates strives to create a collaborative and inclusive workplace built on trust, integrity, dependability, and support for one another. To make sure this is true for all of their team members, they are intentional with their commitment to promote inclusion, diversity, and equitable opportunities. They want all of their team members to feel accepted and valued. This is a part of who Interstates is and aligns with their core culture.

At the ABC National Awards Ceremony, Louise Ozmina, HR Business Partner from the Interstates Rocky Mountain Regional Office located in Fort Collins, CO, was there to accept the award on behalf of Interstates' Inclusion Team. "As a biracial woman, the work the Inclusion team has done means a lot to me personally and professionally. It's humbling to be recognized by ABC for what we've accomplished and a reminder for us to continue pushing forward. I am thankful to all of my fellow team members on the Inclusion Team and to everyone at Interstates who advocates for a place of belonging for all. We can't do this alone, and we only win by working towards a better future together! I am excited to see what this team can accomplish in the future."
