Community Impact Night

The public is invited to join us for a community impact night at the Sioux Center Pizza Ranch benefiting the Sioux Center Library Director, Becky Bilby, in her ongoing battle with leukemia and her connective tissue disorder. Pizza Ranch will donate 10% of the total sales to the Bilby family plus all of the donations received on her behalf.

Becky has a connective tissue disorder that causes her arteries to dissect causing heart attacks but along with that, was diagnosed with leukemia two years ago. Her leukemia is currently controlled using a very expensive form of chemotherapy. She will be on the form of chemo for life to keep her white count in check. The family undergoes many medical expenses for these two combined conditions, medications and trips to Mayo for constant monitoring. All donations received will be used to offset these costs.

Interstates Reaches a Safety Milestone

A million work hours checked off without a recordable injury is a rare feat in the electrical construction industry. Fewer than 100 other contractors have done this in the United States, EVER. In the first week of May, Interstates reached the million-man-hour mark for the third time. This means they had one million working hours safe across all job sites without a recordable injury. If you're part of the Interstates family, whether in Lubbock, TX, Hartwell, GA, Sidney, OH, Fort Collins, CO, or Sioux Center, IA, you've likely heard something like...

"We want you to leave the same way you came."

"Rules don't keep people safe; culture does."

"We're committed to a zero-injury culture."

...and it's truly meant. Ian Seuser, Interstates Director of Safety, said it best. "To reach this goal, we required support and buy-in at every level of our organization. We also needed field leaders who believed in the importance of the well-being of all our team members." Even though Interstates' insurance provider recently gave them the highest safety score ever given in the provider's survey, the company continues to find ways it can do better. To instill this commitment to safety, Interstates adopted a behavioral-based safety culture many years ago that continues to evolve and stretch their people. This culture is proactive rather than reactive and is comprehensive starting from day one at Interstates. Why go through all of this? Kyle Jones, a Foreman at Interstates, stresses the importance of practicing the safety rules. "Rules have been created because something has happened...they've had to take the hard lesson and learn the hard way." Because Interstates considers itself one big family, they take the rules and requirements seriously, so their people don't have to go through the hard lessons.

Learn more about Interstates by visiting www.interstates.com or follow them on Facebook @InterstatesCo.
